TWENTY-SIXTH REPORT OF THE DISTRICT, CRIMINAL, AND PRIVATE LUNATIC ASYLUMS IN IRELAND.

TO

HIS GRACE JOHN WINSTON, DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH, K.G., LORD LIEUTENANT-GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR GRACE,

We have the honour to submit to your Grace our Twenty-sixth Annual Report on the condition of Lunatic Asylums and of the insane in Ireland under our supervision during the year 1876.

INTRODUC-
TORY.

In order to afford more definite information on the subject we subjoin a comparative table of the number of the mentally affected of all classes, both in public and private institutions throughout the kingdom, as well as of those returned to us as being at large or with their friends at the close of the past and the immediately preceding twelvemonth.

On the 31st December, 1875, there were—

	M.	F.	T.	Statistical summaries.
In Public or District Asylums, . . . . .	4,143	3,599	7,741
In the Central Asylum for Criminals, . . . . .	134	38	172
In Lucan Government Asylum, . . . . .	7	23	29
In Private Asylums, . . . . .	271	382	653
In Poorhouses, . . . . .	1,275	1,904	3,179
In Gaols, . . . . .	1	2	3
Making a total of . . . . .	5,830	5,947	11,777

On the same date, 1876, there were—

	M.	F.	T.
In Public or District Asylums, . . . . .	4,310	3,733	8,073
In the Central Asylum for Criminals, . . . . .	133	34	166
In Lucan Government Asylum, . . . . .	4	20	24
In Private Asylums, . . . . .	257	387	644
In Poorhouses, . . . . .	1,268	1,948	3,216
Making a total of . . . . .	6,001	6,122	12,123

From the foregoing summaries it will be seen that on the 31st December, 1876, there were altogether, and between both sexes, 346 patients in excess of the number resident in public institutions at the end of the preceding year. While on a like comparison, there were 37 more in poorhouses, and in private licensed houses 9 less at the same date.

INTRODUCTORY.

Now as regards the reputed insane at large, a diminution would appear in 1876; the number then being 6,607 as against 6,848 in 1875, a difference of 241, so that virtually, making allowances for the fluctuation of the population of the country generally, little or no alteration, it may be said, has obtained in regard to its lunatic element—18,625 persons being reported to us as mentally affected in 1875, and 18,730 in 1876. The statistics with which we deal, collected at different times, and in some instances by different parties, warrant, from their similarity, a very presumable fidelity on their accuracy, so that we may set down 3·50 per thousand in proportion to the 5,314,000 inhabitants of Ireland as more or less mentally impaired.

Lunatics at large.

But, as observed by us in a former Parliamentary Report, the returns of the insane at large, or of the non-officially registered, for the most part collected, and on the same day, by a very intelligent body, the Constabulary, cannot, in all cases, be accepted as necessarily accurate, although we are supplied with the name, age, character of the disease, religion, and residence of each individual mentioned in them. Under the heading of lunatics, between both sexes, there are 934. Of idiotic, 4,367, and of imbeciles and epileptics, 1,306. 4,646 belong to the humbler community, the difference, 1,961, to the middle and upper classes.

As a rule, the unregistered above adverted to are maintained by their families, save when becoming intractable or dangerous, they are received into poorhouses, or, as generally occurs, are either committed by magistrates to district asylums as paupers, or sent by their friends to private licensed houses.

Lunatics in Workhouses.

With reference to the insane in unions, the great majority of the actual lunatics, or of those who had formerly been in full possession of their reason, and amounting to 1,429, have been for years located in them, aged, decrepit, and hopelessly demented. Unaccustomed to asylum treatment they have become habituated to their position; the remainder coming under the denomination of idiots, imbeciles, and epileptics, form a total of 1,787.

An encouraging feature connected with the idiotic community in workhouses is referable to the fact that between simple and epileptic idiots under fourteen years of age, there are at present but 93, while between fourteen and thirty years, there are no less than 514, and above thirty, 1,180. The natural inference being, that idiocy must unquestionably be on the decline, probably, too, as the result of increased union and asylum accommodation in the existing generation, and the checking thereby of the propagation of so sad an infliction through wandering imbeciles and lunatics.

Lunatics in District Asylums.

With reference to the immediate operation of district asylums during the past year, we first advert to the number of patients in them on the 31st December, 1875, viz., 7,741. In the course of the following twelvemonth the admissions were 2,344, raising the aggregate under treatment to 10,085—5,400 males and 4,685 females. Of the admissions, 232 only—101 men and 131 women—were effected through the legitimate mode, namely, by order of Boards of Governors, or of the Inspectors. 798—367 and 431—of either sex respectively were taken in by Resident Medical Superintendents as urgent on their own authority; while 1,239—737 men and 502 women—were committed by magistrates as dangerous lunatics, some few we are compelled to remark on rather frivolous pretexts, but to whose cases we directed immediate attention, and 75 by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant—53 males and 22 females. The great advantage, and one so needed, of having patients admitted by Boards, consists in the certainty, that thereby their proper chargeability will be secured, and in each case useful information as regards the individual's past history afforded on the form of application, whereas in the other modes of admission the statements, generally speaking scant and unreliable, render a subsequent treatment difficult, at least in the beginning, and the liberation of recovered patients unless placed directly under the care of friends on leaving the institution unsatisfactory, a state of things we have endeavoured to combat as much as possible.

TORY.
Analysis of statistics.

The discharges in 1876 as cured amounted to 970—506 males, 464 females; the improved to 225—130 and 95 of each sex. Twenty-five males and 22 females were taken home by their friends incurable, but tranquil; some few of them on recognizances, they having previous to admission evinced dangerous or vicious tendencies.

The deaths within the same period reached 765—395 men, 370 women—including four suicides three of them males; on each a coroner's inquest was promptly held, and verdicts of an exonerating character returned, in one instance, however, with an expression of opinion by some members of the jury, that the window from which the deceased threw himself was not constructed with due strength against such an occurrence.

Deaths.

Analyzing the results of treatment from the preceding data in district asylums, the cures whether estimated by the number admitted on the one hand, or on the other by the aggregate under supervision, bear a very favourable proportion, being in the first instance 46, and in the second 9.70 per cent, the recoveries in the abstract, and on the latter basis of comparative paucity, might seem to be very low if the cause was left unexplained, but it should be borne in mind that unfortunately the incurable are very largely in excess to hopeful cases, in every lunatic institution throughout Europe and America, but perhaps somewhat more elsewhere than in Ireland, in which latter they are fully as four to one. As indicative that the proportion of recoveries is dependent on the time when judicious treatment is speedily adopted, we have a particularly strong evidence in the statistical returns before us of last year of the certain benefits derivable therefrom, for out of the 960 absolute cures between both sexes recorded in it, 579

Results of treatment.

INTRODUCTORY.

were placed in asylums within three months from the first show of delusions, while of the discharged 225 improved, 67 out of the number were in asylums less than four months.

On the score of mortality 796 deaths; the average ratio to the total in asylums during the past year was 7·60 per cent., comparatively speaking not an unfavourable proportion, for it should be also remembered that the insane are subject to the combined and depressing influences of physical and mental disease, and the reaction of one on the other, a condition which can be diminished only by proper asylum treatment, and the benefits derivable from constant care, good dietary, exercise in the open air, and suitable occupations.

The per-centages of deaths would on the whole be almost one lower, were it not for the unusual mortality at the Metropolitan Asylum in consequence of a very fatal epidemic of pulmonary affections, which continued rife for some months in the city.

We are happy to state that no accident involving life or any serious consequences occurred during the year, except the suicides already enumerated, notwithstanding the number of patients under treatment entered as dangerous to others, or disposed to self-destruction averaged 980.

Method of preparing Annual Report.

Adverting to a minute of the Chief Secretary addressed to us since the issue of our last Parliamentary Report, and in which he expressed a desire that our observations on the extent of lunacy and condition of asylums in Ireland should be limited as much as possible to statistical returns and general deductions from them, save when a necessity existed for directing the attention of the Executive to wants or faults which needed Governmental intervention, we are gratified in stating that we have in the latter respect little cause of complaint.

It must be apparent that the compilation of reports from year to year on subjects which scarcely admit of variation within so brief a period becomes almost a repetition, but in different phraseology of what had been already presented to Parliament—for scarcely has an annual report been published before materials for the ensuing one have to be collected, changed in little from that immediately preceding, save in monthly dates and figures, and the statistics incidental to the progress of an organized department. Furthermore, the special reports on each public institution for the insane of this country, communicated to the Chief Secretary, under thirty-two separate headings or queries, afford at the end of each twelvemonth ample information for the guidance of Government in all details of practical utility.

General remarks.

With reference to the medical, fiscal, and domestic or moral management of the twenty-two district asylums in Ireland, placed under the immediate control of Local Governors, selected by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, we are enabled to speak on the whole, as may be gathered from the antecedent portions of the present report, in favourable terms, and as thoroughly fulfilling the object of their erection and maintenance, allowances being made in regard to some few of them for their very limited capabilities.

Enlargements and interior improvements of a structural character commenced in 1875 have not only been effected, but others were undertaken in the course of the past year, involving an aggregate expenditure of nearly £100,000. Considerable additions, on urgent recommendations from the Inspectors, have also been made to original farms in some instances, while in other the purchase of more land only awaits the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant in Council.

Increased means of comfort with a better and more suitable class of furniture have been gradually provided, so that not only has a general accommodation been actually obtained, or is about to be made available for 500 patients, but the asylums themselves, as great public institutions, rendered thereby more creditable to the country, and in character with the best regulated elsewhere.

There are, however, two northern districts in regard to the lunatic provision for which up to the present we can neither congratulate ourselves on success, anxious as we have been to secure better arrangements, nor some of the local authorities in their mode of procedure, however well intentioned it may be. We refer to the counties of Derry and Armagh. In the former the Asylum Board and two Grand Juries recognised by distinct resolutions the advisability of abandoning the old, ill-constructed, ill-placed, and incommodious buildings, erected nearly fifty years back for 120 patients, and now largely overcrowded without the feasibility of enlargement, for the purpose of erecting a suitable institution, replete with modern improvements, on an open rural site, but when the immediate locality came to be selected, differences of opinion arose between former advocates, who had memorialized the Lord Lieutenant in favour of a new asylum, ending in a do-nothing policy—both parties pressing objections on the Government to any changes whatever, each equally desirous on the score of economy to harbour the lunatics of the district in poorhouses, and to take advantage of the 38 & 39 Vic., by obtaining a weekly rate in aid of 4s. from the Treasury—an arrangement to which the Local Government Board is not favourable, lest it might interfere with discipline, and which, while fully recognising the benefits derivable from the Statute if it was carried out as intended, we believe would prove deleterious to the insane poor generally of the city and county of Derry.

Armagh and Londonderry
Asylums.

Similarly at Armagh, local difficulties have been thrown in the way against carrying out objects and resolutions which on mature consideration after repeated discussions had been adopted by those most competent from experience to estimate the lunatic requirements of the district—namely the asylum Governors. The opposition to an enlargement of the buildings for about a hundred beds absolutely required, and at the same time the procuring some additional land lying in close proximity to the existing premises, being based on the ostensible plea of expense to the ratepayers.

It must be conceded that the proper care of lunatics, in themselves an exceptional body, and requiring, not alone in their individual capacities, but in their social relationship to the State,

INTRODUC-
TORY.

special treatment and protection, is attended with considerable expense, still the fact, so far as the local taxes are concerned, should not be overlooked, that Government pays fully two-fifths of their maintenance. As under the 1st and 2nd George IV., cap. 33, as well as subsequent amendments, the decision rests with the Executive alike in both cases, we anticipate the pressing wants of the lunatic population of both districts will be speedily supplied.

Improvements,
other Asylums.

There are other asylums in which improvements and alterations have been suggested by the Inspectors, and although not adopted by their Boards to the extent we could desire, it is unnecessary to refer to them in the present report, the unwillingness we have to deal with not arising from any opposition to our views, but from a dislike to incur expenses however small without an unavoidable obligation to do so, and it must be said that the governors of these institutions while desirous to act in a spirit of fair consideration to justifiable applications, are by no means inclined to be over-liberal in pecuniary outlays, and the less so, we are disposed to think, since the concession of the rate in aid.

Appendices.

We have to observe that several returns relating to dietary, accommodation, expenditure, attendance of Governors, provisions consumed, &c., &c., which, in compliance with regulations affecting the method of compilation, were, in some antecedent reports, incorporated directly in the text, have, under more recent instructions, as already adverted to, and in accordance with our primitive system, reverted to the Appendices.

Superannuation.

The table of officers which will not appear again for five years has been thoroughly revised up to the period of presentation—such revision being advisable as the dates of original appointments will constitute a basis hereafter for the superannuation of Resident Medical Superintendents.

EXPENDITURE
AND

EXPENDITURE AND ACCOUNTS.

With regard to expenditure for the maintenance of district asylums in Ireland, we present in Table 19, page 60, the usual comprehensive summary of all moneys received, from whatever source, and all sums expended equally from every cause of outlay, with this difference, that the table in question represents the reliable and unalterable fiscal condition of affairs during the year 1875, as audited; and it is gratifying to note that this large expenditure, evolved as it has been from the returns rendered by each Resident Medical Superintendent, and checked and balanced with accuracy after a scrupulous re-adjustment by the auditors under proper heads, presents itself almost identically as it had appeared in our Twenty-fifth Report in its unvouched state, the total disallowance as affecting all the asylums, and on technical grounds being inconsiderable, not exceeding twenty pounds, and carried to account. The general outlay, amounting to £190,139 17s. 9d., was regulated upon a judiciously devised system of checks and counter-checks, through means of which no irregularity or extravagance could possibly have arisen. At the same time little necessary on the score of expense has been denied the patients.

When it is borne in mind that this expenditure is based on periodical estimates during the year, framed by the Governors at their monthly meetings with exactitude, subsequently transmitted to our office for examination, and afterwards liable to be further checked in the office of the Privy Council, we think no reasonable apprehension need be entertained in any quarter as to the adequacy of the organization in connexion with this department of asylum management.

EXPENDITURE
AND ACCOUNTS.
Estimates.

The Privy Council Rules make the Resident Medical Superintendents responsible for regularity and correctness in the preparation of the accounts, though the actual labour thereof and the keeping of all the current books and vouchers devolve much more upon the clerks, who, on the whole, are an efficient body of officers, discharging duties of so responsible a character that we think at least in some instances, both they and the storekeepers, who perform work constant and very laborious, merit somewhat higher salaries than they at present receive. We hope, during the year, to be in a position to devise a scale upon the basis of existing rates, which, taking contingent circumstances into account, shall at least approach uniformity.

Revised scale of salaries for Clerks.

During the year the 4s. per head per week, granted by the Treasury for the three quarters of a year to which it applied, amounted to £56,948, which left a net expenditure of £133,191 17s. 9d., a sum by which the actual cost on the ratepayers of the counties composing the districts, was covered by fully 30 per cent., or in round numbers, reduced from £24 to £16 per patient, a diminution which will be still more apparent when instead of three quarters, the whole twelve months is included.

Considering this very large and unexpected concession from the Treasury, which has been equally extended to both countries, we think that Boards should take a more liberal view of the interior economy, so far as it relates to comforts above what are included in the category of necessities of those costly institutions, including a better recompense for those generally engaged in their management, not only as already indicated, but especially where it applies to officers whose positions are alike of the highest responsibility, and whose claims on account of length of service are not equitably adjusted.

Salaries of Officers.

WORKHOUSES.

WORKHOUSES.

The number of idiots returned to us as being accommodated in Union Workhouses during the year 1876 is 1,787—757 males, and 1,030 females, the numbers respectively of each sex during the preceding year having been 731 and 986, total, 1,717; showing a variation within this category of 70. The simple lunatics confined in these establishments during the year under review was 1,429, made up of 511 males and 918 females, as against 544 males and 918 females at the close of 1875. The total number of classes mentally affected in poorhouses being 3,216, exhibited no marked increase upon previous years; but maintained that rate of progressional advance in accord with the growth of outward influences which we might fairly expect in the community at large.

Statistics.

WORKHOUSES.] It will, therefore, be perceived that the Act passed in the year 1875, the 9th section of which was framed to disembarass District Asylums of chronic and harmless cases of a character similar to those already in workhouses has not been availed of by Boards of Governors and other authorities concerned. It has, consequently, so far failed up to the present in the purpose for which it was introduced. This we attribute not to any supineness on the part of those responsible for asylum management, but rather to a belief amounting almost to a conviction, entertained by some of them, that after all workhouses, admirable as no doubt they are, as receptacles for paupers, and those whose malady assumes no pronounced form, are not the fitting places for lunatics who require the appliances, curative treatment, and other special advantages which can only be found in hospitals for the insane, constituting as they do a class of institutions so distinct and apart from all others, owing to the peculiar and exceptional character of their belongings, that an assimilation of other public charities to them, even in a modified shape, such as the arrangement in question would seem to indicate, will, we are apprehensive, be attended but with limited success.

Transfer of cases. Although much may be said as to the saving of money which might be effected by the transference, other considerations should not be overlooked before assigning the wards of a poorhouse to insane patients, for experience has proved that it is a matter of the utmost difficulty to treat cases of lunacy with any degree of probability as to their recovery unless ample means are provided for recreation, amusement, and occupations of a suitable kind; and with respect to the incurably idiotic and hopelessly demented, humanity demands that they should be placed in circumstances which will afford them all the interest and enjoyment of life, of which their mental condition is capable. Now these considerations involve a new field of outlay opposed manifestly to the economic principles upon which workhouses have been established. All in them is cheerless, naked, and monotonous, though clean, orderly, and healthy; in fact in strict accordance with what workhouses should be. In the aggregate, most costly to the ratepayers, there is, consequently always, for obvious reasons, every reasonable desire to keep the expenditure at a minimum.

Medical treatment in Workhouses. These establishments have received much attention from us in our visits of inspection during the year, upon which occasions we carefully inquired and ascertained that the lunatic inmates were properly and kindly treated. We have had no instance of hardship or neglect to report. On the contrary, we noted a general disposition to treat these classes with great humanity. Looking to the number of poorhouses, of course an insuperable difficulty to visit all of them on the score of mere locomotion, and with due regard to our other various duties of inspection, presented itself; but as the Act in question recognises workhouses as accessories to lunatic asylums, we felt called on during the year to test as much as possible their adaptability as such, bearing, too, in mind the increased allowance derivable from the rate in aid for such patients as may be transferred to them.

Visitations.

CENTRAL ASYLUM, DUNDRUM.

THE CENTRAL ASYLUM.

Agreeably to the provisions of the Seventeenth Rule of the Code approved by the Lord Lieutenant and Council on 4th October, 1876, for the good conduct and management of the above asylum, Dr. Ashe, the Resident Physician, has transmitted to us the following general report on the condition and expenditure of the asylum during the year 1876, and as to the manner in which the staff of officers and servants have performed their duties, which we publish in accordance with that rule:—

"I have the honour to forward to you herewith the Statistical Tables of the Central Criminal Asylum for the year 1876." In addition to the information contained in them, I beg to subjoin the following report:—

"The expenditure on the asylum out of the Parliamentary vote for Expenditure. that purpose, in the estimates for the years 1875-6, and 1876-7, amounted in the year 1876 to the sum of £6,267 19s. 6d. This includes the cash expenditure on the farm and garden for the first three months, but not for the last nine. During the last nine, according to the present instructions from the Audit office, the produce supplied has been charged against the vote for provisions as expenditure, and the outlay on the farm and garden has been charged against the cash so provided. The daily average number of patients having been 166, the above sum gives an expenditure of £37 16s. 2d. per head. The cost of coal, new works, repairs, furniture, superannuation pensions, and stationery is not included in the above sum, being paid for by other public departments.

"The expenditure on the farm and garden during the year has amounted to £492 12s. 5d.; and the proceeds therefrom to £835 18s. 4d., including the value of produce supplied to the asylum, showing a profit of £343 5s. 11d., or, for about nineteen acres farmed, £18 1s. 4d. per acre. Farm management.

"On my appointment as Resident Medical Superintendent in the early part of the year, the management of the farm and garden did not appear to me to be in a satisfactory condition; and after a series of investigations I felt myself obliged to report the land steward to the inspectors for embezzlement and forgery, which resulted in his dismissal, and subsequent trial and conviction before the commission of Oyer and Terminer. I have reason to believe that the returns from the farm and garden will be more favourable in future in consequence of his removal.

"With this exception, I am happy to be able to report in highly favourable terms of the moral conduct of the staff of attendants, both male and female. The visits of the extern officers have been regular and their attentions valuable. From my colleague, Dr. Hughes, the Visiting Physician, I have at all times derived valuable aid and support; and I have to thank him and the chaplains alike for their courtesy and their assistance. With regard to the patients, no death by violence, accident, or suicide, no accident, except of the most trivial description, and no violent outburst has occurred since my appointment. In the case of one man only, who had already committed two murders, and who avowed that, if possible, he would commit more, have I found it necessary to resort to special precautions to ensure the safety of those around him. Restraint has occasionally been necessary in his case, and in that of a demented and very dangerous female patient; but seclusion for a time has proved sufficient for other cases, and has seldom been necessary on the male side, and on the female only in consequence of some passing outburst of feminine passion or temporary frenzy. Conduct of staff.

"I regret to be obliged to report that the water supply of the asylum Water supply.

THE CENTRAL

is not satisfactory. The entire supply is derived from the pumps on the premises, which are altogether worked by the hand labour of the patients. In the dry season this water has to be drawn from a depth of over fifty feet, and thrown up about fifty more to the tanks. I need hardly point out that the labour of raising the water supply of an institution like this through a height of 100 feet by the manual work of insane patients, is far from desirable. Further, the supply is of the most limited character in the dry season; and the heavy pumps are continually undergoing repairs, which still more inconveniences the establishment. To crown all, the water itself, when actually obtained at whatever cost of labour, is of most excessive hardness, and very unsuitable for drinking, culinary, and laundry purposes. I have recently made a careful examination of this water, and find that the temporary hardness, by Clark's scale, amounts to 28°, the equivalent of twenty-eight grains of carbonate of lime per gallon; and the permanent hardness, or that which cannot be removed by boiling, to 12°. This latter amount is much too large, being due to the most objectionable salts, viz., the chlorides and sulphates of lime and magnesia: the permanent hardness of a good water, according to Professor Parkes, ought not to exceed 4°. The total solids, moreover, amount to thirty-nine grains per gallon. Parkes says they ought not to exceed eight for wholesome, or thirty for only usable water. In consequence of the unsatisfactory character of the water supply, I have, in my annual estimate of necessary works, furnished to the Commissioners of Public Works, strongly urged the desirability of having the Vartny water introduced to the asylum, which would give us an abundant supply of soft water at, as I believe, a less expense than would be necessarily incurred, even in completing the second well, begun some time ago on the premises, the supply from which would be no less hard than our present one, and even more laborious to draw on account of its distance from the house.

Dampness of building.

"Another matter, which I think it desirable to draw your attention to, is the excessive dampness which pervades the building, on account of the pervious character of the stone of which it is built. During wet weather the rain not only comes in at the window frames, but actually permeates the unbroken stonework of the walls, appearing inside in great patches of damp over the plaster of sidewalls and ceilings. I find a large amount of rheumatic affection among the inmates, which I have no doubt is due to this cause. I have suggested to the Commissioners of Public Works the desirability of coating the outside walls with a solution of silica, as adopted, I understand, with public buildings in England; and I beg leave again to urge the importance of some such preventive of damp being adopted.

Dining-hall.

"The dining-hall is much too small for the number of patients, and does not even accommodate all the males with the utmost economy of space. I think a new dining-hall is much needed. There has been no epidemic of disease in the house during the year, and the general health of the patients has been good."

PRIVATE

PRIVATE ASYLUMS.

Visitation.

The visitation of private licensed houses, though they are less numerous and contain few inmates, comparatively speaking, with those in public institutions and poor-houses, constitutes no inconsiderable portion of the statutory duties imposed on us. In district asylums for the insane, patients are under a more extended supervision, which is maintained continuously, not only by a large staff of officers and attendants resident in them, but by local boards and extern physicians—whereas private licensed houses, as regards the admission, detention, and discharge of the individuals confined in them, may be considered as altogether under the control of the Inspectors, who thus become responsible in the eyes of society for their proper management and the liberty of the subject.

To secure these desirable objects we have not been remiss in the endeavour to attain them by the practice of frequent visits and at irregular times. The 5 & 6 Vic., cap. 125, directs that two inspections of licensed houses shall be made annually, and that no person shall be admitted into one save under stringent and definite regulations, with two medical certificates to the existence of mental disease, and an order from some competent authority or relative, due notification thereof being transmitted to the Inspectors within three days—as a rule, with an occasional infraction of form, the law in reference to admissions has been duly observed, while from the frequency of our visits, averaging four-fold more in the year than the number laid down, we are enabled to satisfy ourselves that no want of ordinary or professional care shall occur in the treatment of private patients, very many of whom, it is regrettable to observe, so far as their nearest akin are concerned, would be altogether forgotten by them, but for the yearly cost of their maintenance—a neglect of which we have increasing complaints from the invalids themselves. If lunatics unfortunately give trouble at home, that trouble is too frequently condoned by a subsequent inattention to their feelings and social requirements in the way of apparel and means of domestic amusement, which in some few private institutions are so inferior to those in district asylums, that we are disposed to consider that patients in the humbler walks of life and located in the latter, are more favourably circumstanced on the whole than some of the better classes in the former, so much so that we could desire more advantage was taken of them at present of the opening of public asylums to paying patients.

Admissions.

On the 31st December, 1875, there were 653 patients in the private asylums of this country, including Swift's, or St. Patrick's Hospital, the institutions belonging to the Society of Friends, St. Vincent's, under a religious community of ladies, and Lucan Spa. These four, being on charitable foundations, are exempt from the cost of license.

Analysis of
statistics.

During the subsequent twelvemonth 198 cases were admitted, raising the total under treatment to 853—356 males, 495 females. On the 1st January this year the number remaining was 644—257 males and 387 females, the difference being accounted for by discharges between both sexes amounting to 169, of whom 89 were cured, 45 improved, and 35 incurables taken home by their friends. The deaths were 37—36 from natural causes, one from suicide in the case of a lady, and on which a coroner's inquest was held, in presence of an Inspector, and a verdict in accordance with the facts recorded, which, while it exonerated the attendant of actual blame, suggested more minute precautions in future.

PRIVATE
ASYLUMS.

Treatment.

One convalescent, a gentleman out on parole, returned to his family without a formal discharge.

Analysing the operation of private asylums in the past year, the results are certainly not unfavourable, and as tested by recoveries, improvements, and deaths, superior to what obtained in district asylums during the same period; 133 sent out either absolutely cured or benefited out of 851 under treatment is satisfactory, whilst the mortality, calculated on the same basis, scarcely over four per cent., is three per cent. less than in similar public institutions.

We are not sorry in a spirit of justice to make the preceding contrast, as a prejudice exists, and rather extensively, that private licensed houses should not be sustained as it were out of the misfortunes of others. Now although in some instances a cupidity by no means laudable on the part of proprietors may be discernible, we cannot but think that in the hands of persons of education and integrity, they are calculated to render essential benefits to the community at large.

Peculiarities of insanity.

In a preceding report to Parliament we adverted to a very peculiar characteristic in the insanity of Ireland as distinguished from that affliction in the sister countries. There the proportion of lunatics is very much greater among the married than the unmarried; in this country the very reverse occurs in public asylums, while in private the single predominate over the married and widowed by fully five to one. It might appear that prior to puberty there is a large number of insane to be found to account for this; such is not the case; lunacy is a disease not of early life, in fact not one-twelfth of the inmates of private licensed houses between both sexes are under the age of twenty. The malady, as a rule, being developed subsequent to the twentieth and up to the thirty-sixth year.

With reference to previous professions among the insane the military is in a larger proportion in private asylums than any other, being twenty-four of the line against one navy officer, twenty-one clergymen, sixteen lawyers, and ten physicians.

In conclusion, and respecting a long mooted question, we would observe that, judging from the number of inmates of the better classes in private asylums, and as regards the number of those in public institutions, if their longevity—owing to recent improvements in the treatment of the insane—be taken into account, we should say that lunacy at present is certainly not on the increase in this country.

Most respectfully submitting to your Grace the preceding General Report on the department entrusted to our supervision, with the numerous Appendices in detail,

We have the honour to be,

Your Grace's obedient servants,

JOHN NUGENT.

NOTE.—This Return accounts for 1876, all the other Tables (excepting the Audit) being for 1875, owing to a direction from the revising year, it follows that this Return must always be one year behind the others.

(The Reporters have to state that in some more serious trouble and loss of time have been occasioned in their office through a fire, and hope that a proper attention to instructions will obviate the necessity for such correspondence in future.)
